A recapitulation of the budget showing the total for the city and the appropria-tions for the counties gives these figures: Budget Net Increase for 1906. oter 1905.

In a statement accompanying the issuing of the budget, the Board of Estinate announced:

The increase is slightly less than $7,000,000. In obnsidering the requests of the various departments, which amounted to very much more than this sum, this board first determined this as the limit of increase, fixing it by estinating the increase in the city's resources from the General Fund and the Sinking Fund, and from the Income which the normal increase of assessments next year will produce. We believe that, except under extraordinary conditions, expenses of government should not be permitted to increase faster than income, and we have applied that rule. It is therefore to be noted that the increase in the budget just made will not increase the tax rate next year.

Especial pains have been taken to provide for the payment of the prevailing rates of wages, as required by law, and also to provide for Sunday pay for the street sweepers and increased pay for the drivers in the Street Cleaning Department are the changes which it was sought to have the Legislature of the State make and which are now made by the local authorities.

It will be noted that the demands of the city debt for interest, instainents on principal and redemption have required an increase of $1,849,512.48. This was mandatory and is due to the increased amount of bends which the city's activity in public improvements has required. The State taxes are $186,602.20 larger than the previous year. The Police Department requires an increase of $626,236.72, because of the increase in the force and the deficiency in the pension fund. The President of the Borough of Manhattan has had to have an increase of $234,356, most of which is due to extensive street repairs in streets where the repair guarantees of the asphalt companies have expired. The extension of the paid Fire Department into the boroughs of Richmond and Queens has required an increase of $37,000. S. The public libraries have required, by the opening of additional Carnegie branches, an increase of reven is demanded by the enlarged activities of nunicipal government and the increase in

STEEL CORPORATION'S ORDERS. More Unfilled at the End of the Last Quarter Than Ever Before.

The extent of the business which the United States Steel Corporation has on hand is evidenced by the fact that the unfilled orders on September 30, the close of the last quarter, the report for which was published yesterday, amounted to 5,865,377 tons, the largest in the history of the corporation.

The highest previous figure was reached on March 31, when orders for 5,597,560 tons were infilled. Total net earnings amounted to $31240,582, an increase of $935,466. The increse is entirely due to the growth of husings in September, the last month of the durter. Some predictions of far larger increases had been made. The directors at the meeting declared the regular 134 per ont dividend. The report for the marte follows:

LIVE TOPICS ABOUT TOWN.

The skill of the French and Italian chauffeurs was established from the first days they were employed by owners of motors. The Americans are as expert as any other nationality, but it is not to be denied that the smartest kind of a driver to have was a Frenchman. They were the choice of persons who thought more of fashion than persons who thought more of fashion than anything else. Japanese servants were always employed, on the other hand, by persons who thought more of efficiency than of fashion. The Japs were never the style. But they have become what the French call the "last cry of chic" as chauffeurs. No other nationality is considered so smart just now and the motor that attracts most attention in Central Park these autumn afternoons has one Jap to act as chauffeur and another as footman, both of them, of course, in livery.

If the electric signs in the theatre district should suddenly go out it would be no more astonishing to New Yorkers than the pass-$112,654,129 $6,878,884 ing of Matches Mary. But this familiar figure calling out matches at the theatre doors with the curious break in her voice doors with the curious break in her voice is not destined to be on view much longer. Matches Mary is now so feeble that she can scarcely make her nightly rounds. She was in a hospital during most of the summer and is too weak to stand long even if she were strong enough to cover the increased length of the theatre chain. In spite of the stories of the wealth she has accumulated, the old woman in the long black veil has only a few dollars put aside and her present feebleness threatens to exhaust them.

There was talk of a permanent circus in New York for years before the scheme was finally carried to completion. There has been the same kind of discussion about a smaller opera house designed for works a smaller opera house designed for works too small for the great frame of the Metropolitan until New Yorkers who were interested in the question long since lost any confidence in the realization of the idea. But it is soon to be carried into effect. Money has been subscribed for the purpose and the site has been selected. Architects are at work on the plans and New York will have its second opera house before many more months have passed. many more months have passed.

The men who had their hair cut in Europe always regret their recklessness at this season of the year. Now their barbers are trying to get them back to their accustomed coiffures and it needs time.

"If they'd only have a little more taken off," observed the fat barber with a sigh, off," observed the fat barber with a sign, "there'd be no trouble about getting them back into shape. So I tell all my customers to see to it that very little hair is cut off. Then I can bring them around again in two or three sittings. But when they let strange barbers go at them just as they want to, they must count on a winter before they look as they did."

story of how the Interstate Commerce law convention, held at Chicago last week, broke up in a row nearly approaching the dimensions of a riot, and how those who did not approve his rate making policy were told to take their hats and go.

The "regulars," or rather the representatives of the shippers who founded the Interstate Commerce Law Association, adopted a set of resolutions at Chicago approving the President's policy, and at the same time a committee was appointed to wait upon Mr. Roosevelt and acquaint him in a formal way with the proceedings of the convention and the resolutions of indorsements that Dealers. The representatives of the association In representatives of the association insist that sentiment is as strong as ever for federal control of the rate making, and they are strong in their condemnation of the men who, it is alleged, tried to break up the "regular" convention at Chicago.

THINK HE'STHE "PIRATE CHIEF." Boston Police Arrest Man Suspected of

Narragansett Bay Depredations. Boston, Oct. 31 .- The Boston police have in custody a man whom they think is the so-called "pirate chief" who was captain of the yacht connected with depredations along Narragansett Bay during the summer. The prisoner says he is Frank Greeno, at a double jump and rider and horse rolled 20 years old, of 205 East Twentieth street, over together. The horse appeared to fall New York, and he is charged with larceny of jewelry valued at $888 from persons unknown. He was caught this morning with all the property on him. He told the familiar story of the jewelry having been given to him by a man he did not know. He admits that he spent the summer yachting at Cranston, Newport and other Rhode Island resorts, but denies that he has had any connection with the "pirate ship." any connection with the "pirate ship."
More recently, he has been down East, and maps, stationery and cards in his pockets show that he has been in Maine.

The New York police, on information from Boston, made a search for information concerning Greeno, but could find no one in the neighborhood about the address he gave the Boston police who had ever heard of him.

CAR FIRE FRIGHTENS WOMEN. They Scramble to Get Out of a Trolley on the Williamsburg Bridge.

A Fourteenth street car which left the Brooklyn side of the Williamsburg bridge about 7 o'clock yesterday morning blew out a fuse near the Brooklyn tower and caught fire. There were about sixty passengers, mostly women, aboard. The women became panicky, rushed to the rear platform and climbed over the guard rail and girders to the north roadway.

The fire blazing lustily under the car pread to the oil soaked planking between the tracks, but two policemen put out the blaze with extinguishers. The westbound tracks were blocked for twenty minutes.

CALLED DOG AS A WITNESS. Fox Terrier Does Stunts for His Mistress to Prove Her Ownership. Phil, a fox terrier, was called as a witness in the First Criminal Court, Jersey City, yesterday in the case of Staats vs. Priest to establish the question of his ownership. Mrs. Charles Staats of 278 Seventh street said she lost Phil on August 30. Charles Priest of 553 Jersey avenue admitted that he picked the dog up on the street, but said he ran across him twenty-two days before he strayed from Mrs. Staats's keeping. He explained that he had refused to give up the dog because a number of persons had claimed him and he was puzzled as to the ownership.

Police Justice Higgins said that he would be assisted in reaching a decision if Mrs. Staats would put Phil through some stunts. Mrs. Staats said that it would give her pleasure, and Phil took the stand, or rather 2800 Overcoats At 25 to 40% Less than Regular Prices. When a certain great Rochester tailoring house suddenly decided not to make any more four-button model overcoats they found in their shops 2,800 already making for this season. Abiding by their determination to father only three-button coats, they sold the 2,800 to us at a truly great price-concession. This concession was the greater in consideration of our pledge not to advertise the makers' name in connection with the sale of the coats.

If we could but whisper that name to you, it alone would be sufficient to bring you here for clothes, even at regular prices.

For over half a century these manufacturers have known how to make-and have made-only high-grade garments, and to them more than to any one else is due the credit for raising the clothing industry to its present high plane.

In the tailoring of overcoats few custom tailors equal this concern's expert veterans of the bench. Other wholesalers sometimes say: "Our coats are as good as ---'s," naming this Rochester house, but never even claim that their coats are BETTER.

We could put these goods in at regular prices and make a more than handsome profit. But we bought them under price, and our customers, as always, shall have the benefit. Right at the very beginning of the Winter season comes this typical Brill sale. You cannot afford to miss it.

Special: Ninety per cent. of these coats have a silk strip sewed on the inside of the velvet overcoat collars. Your white linen collar is thus protected from soiling by the overcoat collar. This is a new and welcome feature that you'll appreciate. Sizes to fit all men.
